New guidebook on SME Internationalisation

Why should SMEs expand their business beyond the EU?

- An estimated 90% of global growth will originate outside the EU by 2015.
- Developing and emerging markets are expected to account for 60% of world GDP by 2030.

But:

- Only some 3 percent of the Enterprise Europe Network's Partnership Agreements presently involve businesses outside the EU or countries covered by the EU's Competitiveness and Innovation Programme (CIP).

There is a huge potential for EU-based SMEs out there!

Dear Colleagues,

An Italian enterprise, operating in food industry since 1980, is looking, as Project Coordinator, for partners. The idea is based on finding a natural antimicrobic

Title: Clean-label Synergistic Compounds with widest possible antimicrobial activity for fresh and processed meats (deadline 11 December 2014)

Summary:

Meat is a nutrient-rich matrix that provides a suitable environment for proliferation of many spoilage microorganisms and foodborne pathogens. The most common sources of foodborne bacteria, molds, and yeasts include gastrointestinal tracts, animal hides, water, soil, feces, vegetation, air, dust, food contact surfaces, and food handlers. For this reasons meat and meat products are important sources of human infections with a variety of foodborne pathogens, i.e. Salmonella spp., Campylobacter jejuni/coli, Yersinia enterocolitica, E. coli and Listeria monocytogenes. Several common preservatives are used every day in the food industry, such as nitrite, sodium benzoate, sodium metabisulfite, sorbate. Nevertheless the increasing availability of sophisticated methods of analysis is more and more posing problems concerning the toxicity, carcinogenicity, mutagenicity and biochemical behavior of some of these chemicals. Therefore consumers ask for food with no or less traditional preservatives. From the other side, there is an increased demand for convenient and packed foods with long shelf-life. All these trends have brought interest in the development of more natural preservatives. Moreover it is important consider that the inactivation or inhibition of one species of microorganisms does not necessarily indicate reductions in other microbial populations. Therefore it is a key point to find a natural anti-microbic with a broad spectrum activity. This goal can be achieved preparing a well-balanced formulation containing more than one natural compounds which action can inactivate or inhibit the proliferation of different kind of microorganisms in order to extend meat products shelf-life and improve their safety. This is paving the way to new generations of natural antibacterial ingredients and opening wide and deep challenges to researchers.
